

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Tells of Allied Tea Room's Success in Cape May. Mrs. Thayer Has Gone to Texas for Two Months—Other Subjects

IT CERTAINLY is a time of comings and goings. Is it not? That's about all Society is doing these days, except, perhaps, in Cape May and other seashore resorts, where fairs and benefits are in the brewing. For instance, Mrs. Ned Crozer is planning a fair for Red Cross, I understand, to be held in Cape May on August 10. Wisely she has chosen a Saturday, I was going to say, but then the days of a needless Cape May are passed now. There are men and men and men, with the Reserves and their officers always about. It's one lively spot, let me tell you.

The Allied Tea Room there is a great success, I hear. Mrs. Cassard and Catherine are working very hard and their helpers are "on the job" too. Peggy Thayer and Gladys Fox are down there this week, and they told me they were having a grand time. It must be a delightful little place to go after an afternoon dip. Think of iced tea and cinnamon toast, and all to help the Great Cause.

I HEAR Mrs. George Thayer started South and West on Monday to join Captain Thayer in Texas. She is going to stay with him until September. At first there was some idea of the children going with her, but it was decided it would be better for them to stay in a climate to which they were accustomed.

So Mary and George are going next week with Mrs. George Packard and her children to Saranac Lake in the Adirondacks. And Betty and Gertrude will stay at home for a while and about the middle of August go down to Beach Haven for three weeks.

Mrs. Thayer deserves a rest if any one did, and I hope she manages to find a little down there without family cares for a couple of months. She has been doing wonderful work up here. Queen Mary's Guild met at her home in Villanova every Monday afternoon for more than two years; in fact, it kept up there regularly until the membership grew so large it outgrew the house and only this spring moved down to the T. De Witt Cuyler's house in Haverford, where the members meet now and sew in the large ballroom.

HOW would you feel if you woke up in the morning to hear a war song from several lusty young throats just outside your window? Well, that's what the people who live near the Marines' Camp at Paoli are being treated to this summer. For the boys march off early in the morning on their hikes, singing their hearts out. And you feel as you awaken and hear them as they tramp by "With such as these could the enemy conquer?" There's a something so courageous and daring about the swing of their walk and the sound of their fine voices. They are all such fine, strong, well-built men, and best of all, they are all so good-natured and jolly. There never could be any doubt but that we will win the war, and win soon, with these boys to fight for us. God bless them!

THE Long Branch horse show is going on now and quite a number of Philadelphians will exhibit there. Mr. and Mrs. William A. Lieber, of the Hill, Bryn Mawr, left yesterday for the show, as they are exhibiting, and Constance Vaucian and Isabella Wanamaker have gone on, too. I wonder if they have difficulty in getting their horses shipped from show to show and back home again. Do you remember the time Mrs. Valentine had last winter, getting her horses back from Baltimore? She finally had to have them driven all the way home, which was not too good for the horses and one expensive job, I take it.

All the shows this year have been given for the Red Cross or other war works and amounts beyond a hundred thousand have been realized in 1918 alone. Pretty good that, it helps along the war work and keeps up the sports of the country. It would be a pity to let all our customs go because we are at war.

The Liebers are coming back to Bryn Mawr from the show and then next Monday will leave for Narragansett Pier, where they have taken a cottage for the summer. Their little boy will accompany them.

ALTHOUGH the guests had only one day's notice there was a goodly gathering at the wedding of Nancy Wynne Cook and Alfred Putnam yesterday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gustavus Cook at "Wynne-ner," Lansdowne. Lieutenant Putnam, who holds a commission in the Marine Corps, is a son of the Earl B. Putnam, and besides possessing literary talent has a fine baritone voice which has been well cultivated. His connections are very interesting historically, as he is a direct descendant, on the maternal side, of John Alden, and is likewise a collateral descendant of General Israel Putnam, of Revolutionary fame and the hero of the celebrated wolf's den episode, escaping from an enemies by urging his horse down a steep cliff.

Lieutenant Putnam, having received orders, was unable to assemble many of his intimate friends for the ceremony, when he was married to Mary Duke, of Young Biddle could not be reached by wire or telephone and was naturally "among those present."

The bride looked especially charming, as she is most attractive. Many members of the groom's family were present, including Mrs. John Bright, who, as Miss Grace Putnam, is well remembered for her exquisite soprano voice and violinistic abilities; Amelia Putnam, who is most popular and is very interested in war work, and Earl Putnam, Jr. Mr. Earl Putnam, Sr., was the best man. Breakfast was served on small tables on the piazza.

It was one of the most delightful weddings of the season and the military atmosphere was accentuated by the presence of Brigadier General and Mrs. Miller, of the Marine Corps.

one day a friend of her mother's, a younger married woman, asked her to go out and spend the week-end with her at her country place, and she went. A very nice young man was invited in to meet her at dinner and they were all seated in the living room, talking, and the nice young man thought those eyes of hers were certainly the loveliest things he had ever seen.

As I said, they were seated in the living room when the maid came in with a tray in her hand and on the tray were four small glasses with a bit of wine in them. The girl of the soulful eyes looked at them askance, but she thought, "I don't take wine, but still it would be rude to refuse, since it is all poured out and would be wasted." So she took them and sipped it daintily, trying to keep from showing how the taste put her on edge, for it was sort of bitter.

Well, they went in to dinner and, of course, have no way of knowing how she felt but for her own words, for she told me of it all two days later. She said: "My dear, that man asked me a question; I don't know where I was, but I thought I was about a block away, so I raised my voice quite loud to answer him that he might hear me distinctly. Mrs. J. turned and looked at me and I felt myself going back, back, back further away from that table. Suddenly, however, a maid having four hands handed me two plates of bread, one on top of the other, and I made a stab to take a piece off of each plate. The other people around the table were talking still, but their voices were very faint and far away; and I seemed to be drifting—drifting. I had not noticed that there were three maids to wait on four people before that, but there were, in fact, sometimes I saw four. I realized what had happened to me; that awful wine had gone to my head. So I exerted all my will power to stay there and not go up to the border of the ceiling, for that was where I felt I was to go by that time. After dinner I managed to go with them to the living room and we played cards. They told me afterward I played a very good game, but I had to learn it that night, and I have never been able to play it since. And the nice young man thought I was awfully dumb, for I only answered yes or no to all his remarks.

"No matter how long I live, I'll never forget it. Next morning I said to my hostess, what was that we had in the living room before dinner last night? And she told me it was a cocktail. Imagine it, that I should take a cocktail, which I had always heard was a dreadful thing for a young girl to drink. It was my last, I do assure you, and her large and wondering eyes had a look of great pain.

I guess she suffered more in imagination than that she showed it, for she said Mrs. J. had assured her that she had only noticed how very quiet and extra reserved she was.

ARMY MEN'S KIN ONLY TO MAKE GAS MASKS

Wives and Other Female Relatives of Soldiers Alone May Work on Protectors

Wives, mothers, sisters or daughters of men in the service may be the only persons permitted to work on gas masks, which are being manufactured in this city in large quantities, within the near future.

This rule, it is pointed out, serves a double purpose. It gives the soldier more faith in the protective work because the women mask-maker knows that a defective mask may mean the death of some person near and dear to her.

The masks being made in this city are said to be superior to any yet. There is the European war. Also, it is said, as a strength yet unheard of has been developed by University of Pennsylvania chemists and will be soon turned loose on the Germans. The gas masks used by the Germans will be unable to neutralize this gas, it is said.

The discovery of the new and powerful gas is the result of many months of diligent work by University chemists. The secret of its manufacture is being closely guarded by Government officials. In tests it is said to have exceeded even the most enthusiastic hopes.

Gas masks being made here are said to be capable of turning away any of the many gases used by the Germans. They are being assembled in a factory in Kensington and an expense factory in Taunton. At the latter factory the eye-pieces are being made in such a way that there is no danger of glass lodging in the eyes of soldiers. A piece of celluloid between two pieces of glass makes them almost unbreakable.

One hundred and fifty army inspectors will be thoroughly every mask assembled in this city. Every mask is tested by officers of the gas defense service.

On Long Island the chemical apparatus which neutralizes the gases is placed in the containers of the masks and from there they are shipped to the front.

Since the army took over the soldiers' mail, General Pershing said, considerable improvement has been noted, and the amount of undelivered mail matter decreased.

Senator Urges Formation of $50,000,000 Government Corporation By the Associated Press

Washington, July 25.—Formation of a $50,000,000 corporation to encourage the production of rare minerals needed in munitions manufacture was proposed to President Wilson this afternoon by Senator Henderson, chairman of the Senate Mines and Mining Committee.

Henderson told the President that the House bill designed to encourage production of these minerals would tend rather to discourage it because of its licensing provision. He proposed a substitute bill that would leave the whole matter of price fixing and stimulation of production in the hands of a Government corporation.

SOLDIERS IN FRANCE ARE SAVING MONEY

Many Deposited With Salvation Army With Instructions to Send It to Relatives Here

Evidence that American soldiers in France are not spendthrifts, but are constantly thinking of the folks at home, was shown in a cablegram from Salvation Army headquarters in Paris authorizing territorial headquarters in America to pay out to relatives of boys "over there" a total of $712.

This represents only one day's deposits of savings by soldiers of a particular district with Salvation Army bankers at headquarters in the advanced battle zones for transmission to the folks at home. It represents what was saved after making allowances from pay for dependent relatives, for Liberty Bonds and for other activities.

The money deposited with the Salvationists is transmitted by cable order and without cost, either to the soldier sending it or to the relatives in this country. There is no task attached and careful check is made to ascertain that it reaches the proper person at home, where it is invariably delivered in person by a uniformed Salvationist.

Yesterday's list was a long one, most amounts ranging from $25 to $100 and the senders ranging in military titles from plain "doughboy" to a major. One sergeant sent $100, destined to a woman in Anna, Ill. A boy in the 101st division sent $50, next with $500 for his mother, in Kennett, Mo. The amount being sent to this district now approximates $16,000 a week.

Much of the money is deposited by the soldiers in the advanced battle zones of the trenches just before they go into them. Brigadier William Dart, western financial secretary of the Salvation Army, said: "The object of the saving is to get the money and get it to the folks at home. The Salvationist immediately notifies Paris headquarters and in less than forty-eight hours we have received the money and get it to the mother, wife or other relative to whom it is destined. This free transfer of money is proving exceptionally popular and has increased the esteem in which our workers are held over there."

Brigadier Dart is receiving scores of letters from relatives of boys who have received money via the Salvation Army missions. One letter told Mrs. H. E. Bennett, of Camden, N. J., that her son, Corporal Harry E. Colman, who had been in France for some time, had just received $25 on the road in a hands of the Salvation Army and as soon as we get paid again I will send my money right away. The Salvation Army is reliable, mother, kind and doing lots for us fellows in the advanced battle zones in France last night that you were receiving my money O. K., and she said she was glad.

"Lester is coming in just a short time. He told Mrs. H. E. Bennett that he has gone down to the Salvation Army but to get himself a canteen full of hot coffee, it does not cost those on guard anything."
